Focal Point of Back to Work Movement and Once Scene Of Bitter Warfare

Union Dist. Leaders Aroused Over Use of State Police

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 18.—State police today dispersed captive mine pickets at U. S. Steel's Red Lion Mine near Uniontown, focal point of a back-to-work movement and scene of bitter union warfare in 1922.

Police estimated that more than 100 men entered the mine which is owned by the H. C. Frick Coke Co., a U. S. Steel subsidiary. Two pickets were reported injured in the clash this morning.

Use of State Police at the Red Lion Mine brought expressions of indignation from district leaders of the United Mine Workers of America. They predicted that 1,000 pickets would be put on duty at the mine within 24 hours if necessary.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 18.—(INS)—Eyes of the thousands of miners on strike in the nation's captive coal mines figuratively turned on Washington today as the idle men awaited the next move in the industrial drama now spotlighting President Roosevelt, John L. Lewis and the foremost figures in the steel industry.

"What will the President do?" was the big question asked on all sides as the strike of 53,000 captive coal miners threatened to seriously curtail national defense production in the big steel mills.

Governor James Sets Nov. 27 for Thanksgiving

HARRISBURG, Nov. 18.—Governor James today formally proclaimed the traditional last Thursday in November—the 27th this year—as the date for celebrating Thanksgiving Day in Pennsylvania.

Thus Pennsylvania will join with more than a score of other States in observing the traditional date while the other States will celebrate on November 29th, the Thanksgiving Day proclaimed by President Roosevelt.

"In this year of war, when three-fourths of the world is engaged in a struggle of death and destruction, spreading over the homes of a billion men and women, we who are Pennsylvanians, have particular reason to express our gratitude," the Governor said in his proclamation.

"By the grace of God, and through the sacrifices of our ancestors, we have been privileged to enjoy a freedom from oppression and tyranny, to maintain our liberty of speech and conscience, and to experience that great happiness of security in our homes, and of the right of each man to earn his daily bread."

JUNIORS MAKE AFGHANS FOR SOLDIERS, SAILORS

Wood St. School Has 100% Enrollment in Red Cross Donations

JEFFERSON AVE. AIDS

It was with joy that the Bristol Branch of American Red Cross learned that in the drive for funds the Wood street public school juniors had attained 100%, in that every member of the school had contributed, and the school thereby was entitled to a Red Cross flag.

Miss Jane Rogers, principal of the school, reported $6.25, an increase over last year.

Miss Laura Ellis representing the Jefferson avenue school, reported $23.03 as the contribution of the school of which she is principal. Miss Ellis also carried the beautiful banner of the Red Cross to her school.

The motto of the Juniors is "We Serve." Mrs. Carl Foell, the chairman of Junior Red Cross, has contacted the schools of Bristol, and received the hearty co-operation of the teachers and pupils.

The children are making afghans for the soldiers and sailors and need odds and ends of wool. Those having such to donate are asked to send it to school, or call Mrs. Foell, phone 2101, who will see that the wool is collected and distributed.

Japanese Accuse U. S. of War Aims

Tokyo, Nov. 18.—Bluntly characterizing new government appropriations as "for the purpose of war," the lower house of the Japanese Diet today accused the United States of an "inordinate desire" to rule the world and heard President Roosevelt and his cabinet castigated as a "cancer" in the side of world peace.

The House unanimously adopted a resolution calling upon the government of Premier Tojo to "carry out unswervingly Japan's established national policies" and added:

"The Japanese people believe they have no chance of rising without fighting this battle through. The increase in bonds and taxes is for the purpose of war."

Former Premier Prince Konoye, in a message to President Roosevelt, referred to the "cancer of the Pacific," said former agriculture minister Shimada.

"But the cancer is not in the Pacific," he said amidst a roar of applause. "It is in the minds of the leaders of the American people."

The House of Peers immediately approved the Government's urgent supplementary military appropriation of about $874,000,000.

Fear Aged Inmates Died In Blaze

Amityville, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Six aged and bedridden patients of the Brunswick home were fear dead today in an early morning fire that destroyed an antiquated frame building which housed more than 40 inmates and attendants.

Three bodies, burned beyond recognition, already have been recovered, but intense heat of the smoldering ruins delayed a final check-up.

Thirty of the patients housed in the building, one of 15 on the grounds, were rescued amid scenes of horror. They were carried screaming from the building on their mattresses. Some were nude, their night clothes literally burned off them.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Lessons Of The Vote

Washington, Nov. 15. IT is possible that the Axis powers will take great comfort from the narrowness by which Mr. Roosevelt's request for revision of the Neutrality Act escaped defeat. Certainly, it is a startling exhibition of disunity when, despite the earnestness of the Presidential appeals, forty-four per cent of the Senate and forty-nine per cent of the House oppose the President in his effort to free the nation from the handicap which a mistaken piece of legislation imposed upon the effectiveness of a foreign policy to which we are overwhelmingly committed.

—O—

BUT, if Mr. Hitler and his friends read into that vote the meaning that in such proportions the American people are divided in their desire to crush the Nazi regime, they will be making a very stupid mistake. The reverse of that is true. The fact is that the sensational vote against revision was the result of a stand by men whose hostility to Hitler is fully equal to that of Mr. Roosevelt, whose eagerness to aid the British and the Russians is in no way less and who were supporting what is called the Roosevelt foreign policy before Mr. Roosevelt made it his own.

CERTAINLY, defeat of a neutrality revision would have had a very bad psychological effect upon our allies, and an explanation of the opposition of members of Congress, generally sympathetic with all-out aid to the British and anything to beat Hitler, is needed. The explanation is as simple as it is significant. It should be said in advance, however, that the rejoicing of the isolationists over the vote is absurd. No one knows better than they how little

Shoots Flying Squirrel

(By "The Stroller")

One of the members of a colony of flying squirrels, which several people have seen in what is commonly referred to as "Tomlinson Woods," on Newport Road, Bristol Township, has been bagged by a Bristol hunter.

The flying squirrel was shot on Saturday by Frank Gallone, of 1947 Pond street, who claims he saw approximately 50 such squirrels in the group.

Gallone turned the squirrel over to Justice of the Peace Edward Lynn, who recalled having seen five flying squirrels in the same woods about 45 years ago.

Other hunters also report seeing some of the species in the same wood-lot.

When Gallone took aim at the little member of the furred tribe, he states there were about half a hundred up the one tree.

Flying squirrels, most types of which are nocturnal in their habits, are rare in this section of the country, and the colony in the wood-lot near Newport Road is believed to be one of the few such in this area.

FASHIONS AND FASCISM

It may be that trouser cuffs, in Italy, are on their last legs. The National Confederation of Artists and Tailors, meeting at Milan, took occasion to call trouser cuffs a lot of names, including unsanitary, pro-British and generally unstylish. Pointing out that they are a waste of precious material, the confederation added: "Trouser cuffs are veritable dust-bins . . . this fad was introduced by a member of the British royal family who went in for setting style as a prince."

This all has a very wistful tone somewhat redolent of the sour grapes of wrath. If a sacrifice of trouser cuffs is indicated for the men of Italy, why not simply snip 'em off and let the rest of the trouser-leg fall where it may? That was good style, long before the well dressed Fascist went for trouser cuffs in a big way, and will continue to be as long as the garment is cut properly.

At the same time, what's to happen to the Roman citizen's sartorial ensemble if the foreign influence is to be summarily excised? Perhaps the federation is getting too warm under the collar. And if not too many buttons are taken from the coat, the vest might feasibly be eliminated.

All in all, considerable time, temper and material might be saved by going back to the old Roman toga, which surely was not a dust-bin, foppish or foreign-looking. A toga, topped by a wreath of ersatz laurel surely would be the last word in balcony wear, as modeled by one who has set the style of imperialism for the Italian people not wisely but too well.

In view of the "dress-simply" note he has sounded for his countrymen, it will be no fault of his if the Fascist man in the street will yet have to get along without a shirt and like it.

DICTATOR TRENDS

The urge to power is an easily understood instinct in man. It is only the acquisition of ultimate power that engenders bitterness and even hatred.

The sudden rise to dictatorship, whether of a nation or of a group, whether openly acknowledged or silently admitted, may be largely due to lack of alertness, to indifference to a menace that has not yet disturbed personal lives, or, more apallingly, to deliberate yielding to present expediency.

The current scene is cluttered with these dictators, large and small—men who wield their power contemptuously. These men adamantly impede progress and work. They scorn the fundamental tenets of democracy, for these tenets stand in the way of absolutism. They know the insatiable lust for dominance, although they do not seem to know that this blindly willful lust will eventually arouse the crushing anger to defeat them.

Their horizons are circumscribed by selfish interest in their own advancement. Their convictions are more apparent than real, since they are grounded only in the shifting sands of convenience. Their unchecked authority leads monotonously, but dangerously, always to the same goal—the goal of abusiveness and ostentation. Their strength is not the strength of the statesman's presence, but the strength of the bully's weapon.

It is time to call a halt.

they had to do with it. Those really responsible are no more isolationists than Mr. Roosevelt himself. What they wanted to do was not to comfort Hitler with a demonstration of disunity but to force Mr. Roosevelt to action that will unify the nation against Hitler and permit us to exert our full strength.

CONCEDING that defeat of the bill would have been a major disaster, it is still easy to understand the point of view of the strong interventionists who opposed it, chief among them being Senator Byrd, of Virginia. Actually, the whole revolt stems from his statement two weeks ago that, while he had supported to date every item of the foreign policy, he did not propose to go one step further toward war until Mr. Roosevelt had done something to end the defense strikes, adopt a decent labor policy, establish a head of his defense organization and remove the incompetents from the key positions.

BEYOND question, Senator Byrd's indictment, which was elaborated and documented in a magazine article, made a deep impression. It voiced what many a man in Congress had in his heart. It was another way of asserting that our dangers from within are as great as those from without; that our foreign policy cannot be strong if our domestic policies are weak; that we cannot be effective abroad if we are ineffectual at home. Every effort to get Mr. Roosevelt to stand up to the labor professionals had failed. Personally, he had killed two bills—one of them Senator Byrd's—that fifteen months ago would have made defense strikes illegal. It was his attitude that has made it impossible to get even a hearing from the Senate Labor Committee on more recent bills.

IN addition, it had been found impossible to induce the President to deal squarely with the inflation danger; to adopt a sensible price-control policy; to formulate a tax policy; to move one step toward retrenchment in non-defense expenditures; to heed the teachings of experience. Every effort to move him in any of these directions had been entirely futile. Coupling all this with the failure to face firmly up to John L. Lewis in the coal strike, the result was a swing of a number of Senators, such as Tydings, of Maryland; Adams, of Colorado; and others, to the Byrd view—to wit: that important as was neutrality revision, it was even more vital to make some sort of stand that would compel the President to straighten out the mess into which the defense program has gotten.

SO long, it was contended, as Congress gave him everything he asked for by overwhelming vote, there was no chance of making Mr. Roosevelt listen to reason and stop playing New Deal and labor politics. The only chance was to make it plain that nothing else would be given him until he altered his course. It was terrible to have to make that stand against neutrality revision but, if it were not made then, it could not be made at all. That was the argument chiefly responsible for the votes of Democrats from the South, where war sentiment is stronger than anywhere else.

TO sum up, that vote was no indication of national disunity. Nor was it indicative of dissatisfaction with the so-called Roosevelt foreign policy of all-out aid to Britain and Russia. Rather, it was an expression of profound dissatisfaction with Mr. Roosevelt's domestic and defense policies—of a belief that unless first we put our own house in order, we can neither move effectively toward the crushing of Hitler nor adequately defend ourselves. Whether Mr. Roosevelt will grasp this fact is doubtful. Whether the narrowness of the escape will make him see the advisability of doing the things that can so easily unify the country remains to be seen. What makes reasoning with him so hopeless is his apparently incurable disposition to believe that whatever he does is right and that those who dissent are either ignorant or vicious or both. In any event, the fight to force him into the ways of competency and to free us from the shackles of labor domination is not going to let up.

GRAND THEATRE

The evacuation of Dunkirk, probably the most heroic stand in the present war, has been reproduced in all its exciting greatness in "A Yank in the R. A. F.," the current attraction at the Grand Theatre.

More than 1000 persons, including star Tyrone Power, Betty Grable and the other players, extras, workers and special effects men were assembled at the "English Channel," 27 acres of flooded land which had been wired so that powder caps could be set off every few feet. These blew water 50 to 100 feet into the air to simulate falling bombs.

FOOTBALL COACHES HAVE TOUGH TIME PLEASING ALL THE FANS ALL THE TIME

By Jack Gill

A game is played and won through outstanding execution of plays, fundamentals and field generalship of the highest quality. It is usually lost on blunders. And as soon as it is tossed away, the coach is immediately placed behind the well known "eight ball."

Couider, if you will, the boy, Every time a team wins a football game the coach praises his boys to the limit. Everytime he loses he tries to shoulder part of the blame. This is particularly true in high school play.

Out at Notre Dame last year Elmer Leyden won seven games and dropped two. The two that he dropped near the end of the campaign had fans hitting high notes on his inability as a coach. Yet two games in a league such as Notre Dame competes in isn't disgraceful.

The humiliation of losing isn't nearly as hard to swallow as the taunts of the alumni or general paying public. Clark Shaugnessy lost and lost and lost at Chicago University and did just the opposite with material at Stanford, Nebraska, Rose Bowl competitors a year ago in California, has lost five straight ball games. It's a two to one that Lincoln fans have patted Major Jones all over the lot lately.

Looking foolish, feeling small, meekly trudging to the dressing room amid a mingling crowd, coaches in high school's fight an uphill battle. Most of them put in an ordinary teaching routine during the day and work hours after the other teachers have left for the afternoon drilling boys till darkness settles.

Then, when their "Saturday Children" throw ball games away and block pathetically, they mope around till next Monday and the following practice session. All the time they know they must win to shoot up the coaching ladder, to gain a better job and obtain more pay. High School coaching, one of the toughest rackets in the teaching field, is watched by everyone, criticized by every townsman and records are printed in local as well as outlying metropolitan newspapers. A good impression is paramount and it doesn't just come from winning. Cushion soft schedules crammed with victories are snickered at by sharp strategists.

The next time a team loses a ball game, weigh the facts carefully. The boys themselves mean a lot in the final outcome. A squad of boys may know how to handle a ball, block and tackle, but if they lack football predestination they will drop a close verdict.

And the boys are liable to make mistakes. Dropping a ball down near the enemy goal line, a sorrowful fumble to any loyal fan or coach, is one of the sins of football, but who ever did it on purpose? An executive dropping a pencil, a machinist letting a bolt slide through his fingers or a rafter driving a crooked rivet are all guilty of the same sort of thing in outside everyday life.

Sometimes, too, it takes more than just good coaching and good playing to win grid games. Some towns can catch the fanfare of collegiate atmosphere. Upstate New York towns build small stadiums for their teams, turn out full force each Saturday to spur them on and lend enough morale building spirit to their teams to nearly send them to the Rose Bowl. The breaks, quickly capitalized upon by aggressiveness, wins many games.

That's a part portrait of your high school coach, either the most popular or most unpopular man in town. His job is watched by hundreds of people. When a new mentor steps into a brand new job he is only assured of one thing—work with a capital W and interference from grandstand quarterbacks and sportswriters.

MacKENZIE RETURNS TO URSINUS LINEUP

Bruce D. MacKenzie, son of Dr. and Mrs. A. L. MacKenzie, of Eddington, has returned to the starting lineup of Ursinus College, Collegeville, after several weeks' rest since his injuries in the football clash with Drexel.

Bruce, who has been a regular on the Ursinus eleven for three years, was on the bench for three weeks because of four torn ligaments in his arm and shoulder.

In addition to his athletic activities, MacKenzie is president of Beta Sigma Lambda fraternity. He is majoring in modern languages at Ursinus.

Reports Received by The Local Red Cross and Thomas L. Leedom Co.'s mills in the near future.

Mrs. Frank Lehman reported the roll call well underway, and that people seem eager to become members.

Mrs. Carl Foell, in charge of the Junior Red Cross, was enthusiastic in her report of the 100% co-operation of the schools. Miss Frances Landreth reported 64 hours motor service given by Mrs. Louis C. Spring, and 194 hours spent on six old cases. Of these, two were of soldier service.

Mrs. Marie Holland spoke of the Red Cross as "the only medium of communication between navy, army and home." She has had 10 active service cases, 15 disabled families, and 37 civilian cases during the past month.

Preparedness for any eventuality has long been the task of the American Red Cross. National defense places huge new burdens upon the organization. Help your Red Cross carry on its work by joining the local chapter at once.

Gwynedd Valley, past president of Montgomery-Bucks Bi-County Council of Auxiliaries, and now sub-chairman of membership. Mrs. James congratulated the Auxiliary on its fine showing in membership, and informed that all but six Montgomery and Bucks units had their membership reports in by the time of the "round-up." Appreciation was expressed by Mrs. Ott for the programs as carried out by the local unit last year, also the fine showing in membership. She expressed appreciation for aiding in national defense, child welfare and junior baseball activities.

Gifts were presented by Mrs. Cassidy to the two speakers, on behalf of the Auxiliary.

Mrs. Robinson, chairman of the membership committee, reported $9 affiliated to date, the quota being $9. She mentioned there are at least 40 additional eligibles for the local Auxiliary. Announcement was made by the president that the January meeting will take place on the 26th instant, with Mrs. Glenn Stewart as speaker. This will be a national defense program. Mrs. Heller, Americanism chairman, is planning for an Americanism program in February.

Mrs. Hart, child welfare chairman, asked that members keep in mind a clothing shower for the March session, new clothing for boys and girls, 12 to 18 years of age, being desired.

A brief report on a meeting of the management was read by Mrs. William A. Thomas, in the absence of Mrs.

Harry Friedrich. A first aid class report was made by Mrs. Robinson, emergency volunteer service sub-chairman. Returns on sale of vanilla were received from Mrs. Baingo. The account of the last meeting of the Bi-County Council was presented by the president, who reminded that Langhorne and Bristol units have agreed to purchase candy during the month of August for veterans at Coatesville Hospital.

A card party for December 3rd at the Memorial House is being arranged, the committee in charge being Mrs. Frank Buckley, Mrs. James Tracy and Miss Rita Keating. Members will donate at the December meeting stamped Christmas cards, to be distributed to hospitalized veterans, to send out to friends as their greetings. mining towns, in homes and in other places where the strikers congregated, the President's next move was the burning question of the hour.

Although rumors circulated that the President was ready to order the Army to take over the captive mines, there were no visible indications that military units were to be moved into the strike sector. Army intelligence men were said, however, to have thoroughly canvassed the strike area.

The strike, designed to win a union shop for the captive coal miners, was reported by district union leaders to be virtually 100 per cent effective.

A complicating development was the unexpected extension of the strike to the commercial mines—those mines that sell their products in the open market, and not directly to the steel companies, as the captives do.

Sympathy strikes, involving at least 6,000 miners, were staged in nearly a score of Pennsylvania and West Virginia commercial mines. These unauthorized strikes quickly brought about protests.

Telegrams were dispatched to President Roosevelt by western Pennsylvania and northern West Virginia coal operators associations calling his attention to the sympathy strikes.

"We beg to advise that five commercial mines located in western Pennsylvania with a daily production of 12,000 tons employing approximately 2,000 miners are closed today by an unauthorized strike in violation of the Appalachian agreement," the Western Pennsylvania Association's message to President Roosevelt said.

To John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, the Pennsylvania group wired:

"Kindly advise what action you will take to put the mines to work in accordance with the agreement."

Plead For Return Of Men To The Churches

churches in the Philadelphia Synod were represented, and that the meeting was the largest in the five years' history of the Brotherhood, the night's affair celebrating the fifth anniversary.

The Rev. Charles F. Freeman, pastor of Salem Reformed Church, welcomed the large group of men and boys to Doylestown.

Coach (Rusty) Callow, who is a prominent layman in one of the Reformed churches of Philadelphia, spoke on the subject "What Is Our Goal?"

"Thank God we are in a country that is free," Callow declared in his opening remarks after stating that he doubted very much whether Stalin, Hitler, Mussolini, Churchill or Roosevelt knew what the present world crisis is all about and what the outcome is going to be.

"We do know, here in America, that America is free because it is a Christian country, and that is the edge we have on others," Callow added.

"Our goal here in America, and the world over for that matter, must be a Christian goal to be successful."

"I can say without contradiction that the practicality of the Bible is much overlooked, by everyone, even people in the profession of coaching," Callow continued. "When you teach young men you must be practical, you can't second-guess them, much less try to out-guess them. They will treat you right if you are practical with them, and the practical things can be found in the Bible."

"Young men react to decency and, in teaching them decent and practical things, you are teaching what I call religion. The Bible tells us, if you please, how to get morale and spirit in your team and in your brotherhood groups. A decent body and soul is all that we ask for every boy and the present world crisis will be licked."

Coach Callow said: "The trouble that some young men have is to see who is the first to get an automobile, or the first to get a drink."

"A lot of men have never been able to live with too much money, and money is a curse in many instances," Callow added.

"Our goal should be service to mankind."

Callow, in briefly discussing the Bible and those who read it and those who do not, said: "A man's conscience may be entirely wrong if he does not study the Bible."

Class hatred in this country was deplored by the Penn rowing coach as "a terrible thing." He pointed out that nothing could be found in the Bible about class hatred.

"It is the business of the church to put aside this idea that one man is any better than another man. Christian charity to all is democracy to me."

Dr. Fretz, of Collegeville, added a plea for a continued increase in interest in the Brotherhood of the Reformed Church to such a degree that it will compare favorably with the fine women's organizations of the church. A similar plea was made by Harry E. Paisley.

Dr. Owen S. Frantz, of Lancaster Seminary, dwelt on the subject of being properly equipped for church life and service to fellow men, which he declared was the chief function of the brotherhood. He recommended that the church play the leading role in the great reconstruction period that lies ahead in this country, and a wholesale "return of men and boys to the church."

Odd Fellows Explain Objection To Fountain

$7. I. O. O. F. has an agreement with the W. C. T. U. regarding the fountain. A copy of this agreement is enclosed for your information. You will notice that the W. C. T. U. promises to keep the fountain in repair. This part of the agreement has not been fulfilled.

Due to lack of repair, water from rains accumulates and becomes stagnant. It is no longer useful as a fountain since the water has been shut off for several years. Prominent Bristolians have asked why its removal had not been sought before this date.

We appreciate the fact that this fountain was erected in loving memory of a prominent citizen of Bristol; but, in its present condition it is by no means a credit to one's memory. If the W. C. T. U. had lived up to their part of the agreement Hopkins Lodge, No. 87, I. O. O. F. would not have asked for its removal. But, under the conditions that now exist, Hopkins Lodge, No. 87, I. O. O. F. desire its removal.

Very truly yours,
HOPKINS LODGE, No. 87, I. O. O. F.

Three Fires Cause $1,000,000 Damage

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—(INS)—Causing damage estimated in excess of $1,000,000, three serious fires roared through industrial and commercial buildings in the Philadelphia district last night and today.

Fed by stores of lubricating oil and grease-soaked flooring, the most disastrous of the fires destroyed the plant of the Audale Company in nearby Lansdale. The flames wrecked the interior of the factory, engaged on $750,000 worth of vital defense orders, principally vital parts for naval construction.

Although the origin of the blaze, which started in the all-important blueprint stockroom, was undetermined, James M. Jenkins, vice-president of the firm, scoffed at the sabotage theory and said the plant's 160 workmen were all veteran employees.

State police and county authorities opened investigations while the flames were still raging out of control and, due to the fact that the plant was important in the nation's defense program, agents of the FBI
